THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

This Invention located by Messrs. F. E. Miller, J. D. Coniff and Misses F. E. Miller, Mrs. E. Miller.

Teachers you have either begun your schools, or are about to begin them. You carry with you a book which you must study to make this the most successful school that our country has ever had. Put your shoulders to the wheel. Our County Board of Education will see that you are well qualified to take charge of schools. Strive to prove that you are in the highest sense of the term. Remember that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Strive to make your school a model of those who are entitled to your care, and your own reputation as teachers, are staked upon your efforts and your conduct.

Teachers, the editor of our home paper, has been so kind and generous to us, and so friendly to our profession, as to give us the privilege of publishing valuable papers. You have made managers of this department. We would say to you, that like yourselves, are engaged in a noble cause. We trust you will do your best to make our school system a permanent one, that we should have to do justice to it. We therefore ask your aid, and shall be thankful for all matter pertaining to this department. If you can give us any information that would be of value to us, address all communications to editors of this department.

Every teacher in the country should bear in mind that it will soon be time for district associations. The importance of these cannot be overestimated. We have tried every effort to keep a permanent organization, but we failed. What was the cause? It was the lack of interest. But we think we have now done our duty to a society that has given us so much, and made our present organization a permanent one. A large part of the counties in the State have such organizations. Why cannot we have one? Teachers, it is your duty, and it is to you that we look for help to turn out to yourselves, to your profession, and to the cause of education.

GATHERING POINTS.

Study looks to know how things ought to be; study men to know how they are.

Silence is the ornament of the ignorant.

One pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it.

Our grand parents used to say, "see what the world is about, then do what the world is about."

No lessons are so impressive as those our mistakes teach us—History.

We cannot skip over the rightness and the wrongness of a single day, nor despise with one slight's skipping foot, nor one week's blighting east wind.—Robertson.

What man want is not talent, but power. In other words, not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.—Balzac's Letters.

And step to step, since time began,

I see the steady growth of man.—Whittier.

GOOD ADVICE.

Parents, if you desire, have your made, now, a good school for the sending of your children to attend school the ensuing school year? Schools are opening and you should prepare, if you have not. Many a bright and hopeful young man has lost his chance of knowledge by not being educated, even for the want of preparation to attend school. You never neglect to provide protection for your stock, and a shelter to shield them from the winter winds. You know that your cattle are necessary and dear to you, your stock. It is negligence, and that negligence will have to be remedied from your mind before the standard of education is reached. Let me assure you, every one profits for the schools that are now opening, and never neglect it hereafter.

Teachers, it is no mere saying, that all that education is in progress, is not to be limited to impart knowledge to them after they arrive at the school-houses. We will have to let the parents see that we feel interested in their welfare, and then we will get together, and then we will help them, who want, who are too old to help themselves, until others will help us. Remember the scriptural phrase, "not helps those that help themselves."

We move the people to a sense of duty, by doing more energy. Then ask for more money and longer school sessions.

GOOD IDEAS.

Much of a teacher's success depends on organization, and that includes proper classification. Do not form mere clubs, but let them be organized justly. Your school students are enough to do. Study well the capacity of each student as compared with the others; if a student has a mental capacity for four studies, give him four; if he has capacity for three studies, give him three, if he has capacity for two, give him two; give him only two; in other words, give the student only such an amount of work as you know he can perfectly, then require a perfect reduction, if he makes any mistake in giving him preparation the "clue" will be out of organization and no good results will follow.

CHOKING A BIG WOLF.
A Young Teacher Choke over the "Schools" Protection Protest by George Blair.
I awoke, and, looking about me, saw the morning dawning cold and gray, as a writer in Ontario, while a recent graduate, said of his first result of studies of the law of nature, then will realize the importance of these laws.

In the future we will offer more extended views on the subject, for the present, however, I leave every teacher to his own resources.

Cutter's Anatomy. Physiology and Hygiene would be an excellent text book, and could be had of any first-class bookseller.

Teachers, you have either begun your schools, or are about to begin them. You carry with you a book which you must study to make this the most successful school that our country has ever had. Put your shoulders to the wheel. Our County Board of Education will see that you are well qualified to take charge of schools. Strive to prove that you are in the highest sense of the term. Remember that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

It is not much more important for us to be in the world than to be. Many people study merely to recite, and as soon as the lesson is recited it is forgotten. They have learned the words and not the meaning and retain. They seem to have no idea beyond recitation. Teachers should endeavor to impress upon the minds of their pupils the necessity of studying so as to learn the meaning of the words, and not merely the phonetics, but the thought. The manner in which a pupil studies determines his future usefulness. If a child has learned to study, right or wrong, it is well to let him go on, and not to rely upon the text book alone.

To get breath was my first care, and after having in some degree recovered, I went up to my house and made myself a bed upon my floor.

Again I should have lost him, had not the dog stopped and brought him to my feet, giving me an opportunity of striking him down, when, to my great vexation, he had the maul-travel been somewhat unmerciful.

I was started to feel the trap chain which I held jerked from my hand, and to see my apparently defunct companion suddenly rise to life and race away at top speed.
